

Our Farm

Blawesome is a four-acre flower farm in western Orange County, North Carolina. We grow over 75 varieties of beautiful, seasonal, organic cut flowers, perennials and herbs. We work hard to create arrangements that inspire joy and positivity, and we specialize in custom designs that incorporate the free spirit of native wildflowers into the more reserved romanticism of cultivated heirloom botanicals.

But what truly makes Blawesome special is not just our product, what is most unique about our farm is our message.

Our Message

Blawesome is a small part of a larger movement known as social care farming, which uses farming as a therapeutic intervention to improve health, social, and vocational outcomes for vulnerable populations. At Blawesome, we use the beauty of locally grown flowers as a vehicle to promote higher expectations and improved community perspectives about the potential, the possibility, and the capability of individuals with developmental disabilities.

Blawesome is a small-scale model of agricultural enterprise, owned and operated by a young man with autism. On this farm, we use the art and practice of growing, designing, and delivering organic cut flowers to promote self, environmental, and community sustainability. We believe that a purpose driven life and healthy relationship with Mother Earth go a long way towards mitigating many of the adverse mental and physical health conditions experienced by over half of the adult population with autism.

Ordering flowers from Blawesome is an ideal way for businesses, organizations, and individuals to enjoy the beauty of fresh, organic flowers while simultaneously supporting the venture of a young man in the community with a developmental disability.

Thank you for considering Blawesome; we look forward to talking with you soon!
